By the time Claude Francis Barry (English, 1883-1970) was twenty-three, he was exhibiting his work with the Royal Academy in London. His early narrative oils gave way to experimentation with pointillism and vorticism, and his etchings won major awards in Italy and France. He refined his use of line and form in the elemental simplicity of his later works as he moved toward abstraction. His passion was always color, and Barry said that color was to painting what love is in a man's life. The twelve paintings reproduced in this calendar reflect the intensity of the artist's passion.
