“I like your buttons, Mrs. Sutton-Jones!” Kind words can be contagious. Cassandra’s simple compliment to her teacher starts off a chain reaction of kindness through the teachers and students at school, adults at work, and families at home. Soon, the entire neighborhood is in a good mood! Cassandra’s kindheartedness comes full circle when her father comes home with a surprise, which Cassandra inadvertently helped happen. Learn how quickly kind words can spread and how easy it is to be a nice person, all while learning a new language!

Reviews

“It's a sweet story of ""what goes around comes around"" in the brightest sense. I love this book. It's a wonderful read to share with kids. It can open the door to all kinds of conversations, real life experiments about using kind words, and how that changes everyone's days.” - Laya “Aunt Laya” Saul

“The text itself is bold and easy to read. The multicultural cast of characters, both children and adults, is very expressive. With only slightly veiled didacticism, readers will learn that 'what goes around comes around.’” - Library Journal
