Excerpt from Tales of the Northwest, or Sketches of Indian Life and Character

They have as many of the vices and follies of human nature as other people, and it is believed no more. An Indian may be dishonest as well as a white, and is about as likely to forgive an injury; if it be not such, as according to the customs of his tribe, must be expiated with blood. Heart of man beats neither slower nor faster un a blanket than beneath a coat and waistcoat.
